Posted by dlhopols on Thu, 07 May 1998 07:00:00 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

In article
<Pine.OSF.3.95.980506183704.6207A-100000@poseidon.ifctr.mi.cnr.it>#1/1, Sebastiano Barbieri <nospam@ifctr.mi.cnr.it> wrote:

> If you close it, could one rename the ever-confusing comp.lang.idl-pvwave to > comp.lang.idl ? I believe the majority of (RSI) IDL users, which are more > than 100, would find that easy.

Hi All,
 I'm familiar with PVWAVE but am currently working with IDL (RSI Interactive Data Language) I read the comp.lang.idl-pvwave newsgroup regularly. The number of new messages per day is reasonable, less than 10 on average. (I use deja news to read messages) The address is a little awkward but once I got used to the dash between idl-pvwave, it was no problem. I do not see a need to change it now, nor do I feel it necessary to separate out the PV-Wave users. The comp.lang.idl newsgroup looks like it has had some mail from IDL/PVWAVE users, so there is some confusion. But I think with a little searching, the relevent newsgroup can be found.
Rose