
Subject: Re: Easy way to make hard copies at full printer resolution

Posted by davidf on Thu, 03 Sep 1998 07:00:00 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I wrote just a couple of minutes ago:

- > Live tools are the right idea,
- > but for reasons that I don't even fully understand I really
- > don't like to use them. Perhaps because I can't see the
- > code to understand and modify how they work. But when
- > I work with them I find myself becoming increasingly
- > annoyed rather than increasingly satisfied. "My God, things
- > just don't lay out in the window properly!" Perhaps I
- > should see a code shrink. :-)

Having finished this rant, I grabbed the nearest magazine and headed off for my morning meditation. I found myself reading this: "Feng shui reveals how our environment can nurture or cripple our contentment, personal growth, health, and relationships."

What those damn Live Tools lack is Feng shui!

Cheers,

David

David Fanning, Ph.D.

Fanning Software Consulting

E-Mail: davidf@dfanning.com

Phone: 970-221-0438, Toll-Free Book Orders: 1-888-461-0155

Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: <http://www.dfanning.com/>
