
Subject: Re: what am I doing wrong?

Posted by Bruce Bowler on Tue, 06 Oct 1998 07:00:00 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

William Thompson wrote:

- > Another way is to use two procedure files. One file will contain the
- > main-level program that you wish to run. For example, let's say you save it in
- > a file called myprogram.idl. The second file will then contain the single line
- >
- > .run myprogram
- >
- > You can then pass the name of this second file to IDL. For example, if the
- > second file is named run_myprogram.pro, then the statement
- >
- > idl run_myprogram
- >
- > will execute the main-level procedure myprogram. It would be just the same as
- > if you had typed ".run myprogram" at the command prompt.

Hmmmmm... I like it...
