Our development group is looking for a high level image processing development tool. We found two products, IDL and PVWAVE, which looked for us very similar. We know that they come from same origin. But what we would like to know is, if there is really any significant difference in both products in performance, features, GUI, etc. Maybe they have their strength in different areas?
For us it would be very interesting to get information about the difference of both tools. Maybe there exists test reports which compare them. Also pointers to sources would be appreciated.

You can also send us directly a email:

Thanks a lot
