
Subject: Re: Object Oriented programming question
Posted by steinhh on Thu, 22 Apr 1999 07:00:00 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

In article <7fn9hp$7dj$1@news.quebectel.com>
"Jean-Francois Lavoie" <jflavoie@ino.qc.ca> writes:

> Hi, I'm new to IDL and I'm looking forward using Object Oriented > programming under IDL. As far as I can see, IDL doesn't support > internal method calling inside a class, am I right ? I mean, > within class A, suppose we have method A::Init and then > A::SetValue, how can (or is it simply possible) to call the
> A::SetValue method from A::Init ? I didn't find any way to do > this yet.. Can someone help ? Thanks, self->SetValue,... or self->A::SetValue,...

The "A::" is optional, but if used it will ensure that it's the class A version of SetValue that's called.

Happy object orientation..

Stein Vidar
