Subject: Re: Object Oriented programming question Posted by steinhh on Thu, 22 Apr 1999 07:00:00 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

In article <7fn9hp$7dj$1@news.quebectel.com>
"Jean-Francois Lavoie" <jflavoie@ino.qc.ca> writes:

- > Hi, I'm new to IDL and I'm looking forward using Object Oriented
- > programming under IDL. As far as I can see, IDL doesn't support
- > internal method calling inside a class, am I right? I mean,
- > within class A, suppose we have method A::Init and then
- > A::SetValue, how can (or is it simply possible) to call the
- > A::SetValue method from A::Init? I didn't find any way to do
- > this yet.. Can someone help? Thanks, self->SetValue,... or self->A::SetValue,...

The "A::" is optional, but if used it will ensure that it's the class A version of SetValue that's called.

Happy object orientation..

Stein Vidar