
Subject: Re: Medical Imaging Question
Posted by levick on Sun, 08 Aug 1999 07:00:00 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

In article <37AA0BAA.99AD6EC5@bu.edu>,
Axel vom Endt <endt@bu.edu> wrote:
> David Fanning wrote:
>>
>> I mean by this that I want to "see" 4094 shades of gray.
>
> I'm not sure about the reference for this, but I read somewhere that the > human eye cannot even distinguish between 256 levels of gray. Isn't that > the reason to use the fancy color tables in IDL?
>

Incorrect. Most studies find that the number of brightness jnd's is about 450.

Ex

Sent via Deja.com <http://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.
