

---

Subject: Re: IDL and WAVE: # and types of users?
Posted by kluegel on Sun, 22 Aug 1999 07:00:00 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

In article <MPG.1229d06edc4672939898af@news.frii.com>, davidf@dfanning.com (David Fanning) wrote:

> If you are thinking about writing a book, or trying > to make a living as a consultant, and you really want > to ask, Is it possible to do this given the IDL/PV-Wave > market size? Then I would say, yes, if you are clever, > do quality work, have a burning desire to work night > and day, can learn the marketing/sales/accounting/public > relations skills it requires to be successful, and > have some money saved up (or an employed significant > other) so you can eat while you are getting things > going. After a year or two of happy clients, it's a > cinch. :-)

As David writes this from his notebook in the Bahamas... :)

-- Tom

Sent via Deja.com <http://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

---