No, no. Do it yourself. That's the way you become an expert!

Cheers,

David

P.S. And, please, in the future give poor Robert a couple more days to bask in the glory before peppering him with suggestions. You have no idea how intimidating it is to see your e-mail piling up with immediate suggestions for how the code you sweated over for days can be improved. It doesn't help, of course, (I speak from experience here) that most of the suggestions are for improvements that (in retrospect) should have been completely obvious to any thinking person writing the code in the first place. :-)
