Subject: Re: Recovery from PostScript file
Posted by raouldukey on Wed, 12 Jan 2000 08:00:00 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

"Liam E. Gumley" <Liam.Gumley@ssec.wisc.edu> wrote:

>
> An indirect method is to scan the printed graph into a high resolution bitmap,
> and then use a program like QuickTrace to digitize the data points:
> http://servermac.geologie.uni-frankfurt.de/QuickTrace.html
>

I have used similar software on a PC called WinDIG that worked in the same manner and it worked quite well. I don't have a URL, but it shouldn't be too difficult to find.

>
> However I think it would be best if you just tell your user that he blew it, and > that he should learn to make backups. This will serve him better in the long run > than trying to extract data points from plots.

Agreed!

Sent via Deja.com http://www.deja.com/
Before you buy.