Does anybody have experience with this? I want to create a fairly simple modeling program that could be accessed through the net. The program will display a multiline graph that will change as the user changes inputs.

The brouchure indicates that I will need ION script and ION java to build the web page. What sort of time investment will this be to get a fairly simple program up on the web?

thanks-Peter Brooker