
Subject: Re: INIT functions... called when?

Posted by John-David T. Smith on Tue, 07 Mar 2000 08:00:00 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

David Fanning wrote:

> Instead of returning the undefined variable TRUE, I'd > return a 1 from your INIT method. That should make things > work better. :-)
>

David sometimes I think you have small wires protruding from the rear of your skull over which the newgroup is fed instantaneously. I'm sure your family has come to know that when you stare blankly at a wall with your eyes scanning back and forth, you're just accessing the latest article. Fastest reply in the west.

P.S. He wouldn't have been able to call p->show if Init had actually been called and returned the undefined variable TRUE... we'll chalk that one up to distraction.
