Subject: Re: Top 10 for young farts
Posted by R.Bauer on Tue, 08 Aug 2000 07:00:00 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Carsten Dominik wrote:
>
> In article <398961FF.960DC51D@dkrz.de>,
>   Martin Schultz <martin.schultz@dkrz.de> wrote:
>> Well, maybe I am cheating here, but as I am still considered a "young >> scientist", I thought I could dare ;-)
>>
>> Working mostly on a Linux system and abhjorring the IDE (to me, it's >> just too cluttered, how can you live >> with three lines of 40 characters as an editor window?), I would very >> much like to see some more intelligence of the command line. There >> should be an auto-complete functionality (TAB would complete a command >> or give you a choice of options), and one should be able to jump back >> and forth with CTRL-arrow, HOME, and END, so that you don't get sore >> muscles when you edit commands previously entered (and you want to >> change the first of twenty arguments).
>
> All this (and much more) is available under Linux if you use Emacs > with the IDLWAVE package. Jump ship!
>
>
I have missed in the past the debugmode in emacs like I have it in the IDLDE.

How did you debug with the emacs?

Reimar Bauer