Hello,

I am having trouble compiling source code I have included into an IDL project file. The individual files compile just fine. But when I generate a new project, add the files to the project, and then try to compile, I get an error message for each file. Its as if the project is recognizing parts of the file path as a source file. When I open the individual files they compile by themselves just fine. I have gone through the manuals and I am doing exactly what they say. This is IDL 5.3.1 under Windows 98.

Any suggestions as to what subtle 'feature' I have missed.

Thanks,

Tom Price
