"Carsten Dominik" <dominik@astro.uva.nl> wrote in message
news:qzuhf48ppm7.fsf@antares.astro.uva.nl...
>>>> >> "H" == Henkie  <deckard_007nospam@deja.com> writes:
>
> H> "up runs 'previous-line'
> H> 'previous-line' is an interactive compiled Lisp function
> H>  -- loaded from "simple.elc" "
>
> H> Is this how it should be ?
>
> No this is wrong.  I believe you are still running IDLWAVE 4.5.  Try
> C-h v idlwave-mode-version RET

Have you ever ... ?  You're right.  I was so convinced that I was running version 4.7.
I'm so sorry about my stupidity, still quite new to all of this.  Thanks a lot.

>
> H> OK,  I've found the problem.  It is not related to idlwave.  I'm running CDE
> H> on HP-UX and it appears that if I launch something from the deskop (like > H> XEmacs), it does not run in my own environment.  So it has no access to my
> H> environment variables.  Can you believe this ?  It took me quite long to > H> find out.
>
> I sure can believe this.  It is a common setup problem.  You need to > setup the environment in the script that starts your window manager stc.
> - Carsten

I have solved this. It works now.

Henk