

---

Subject: Re: Many procedures, what to do?

Posted by Craig Markwardt on Fri, 12 Jan 2001 23:41:14 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

"Pavel A. Romashkin" <pavel.romashkin@noaa.gov> writes:

- > No, it will not, but are you on 5.2? I personally dislike version
- > checking for the purpose of disabling some portions of the code :-( But
- > a library saved as .sav will not open in earlier versions anyway. Isn't
- > this what you want to do? Save all routines in a .sav, then call it by
- > the name and they all instantly become available (to those lucky ones
- > who happen to have the same IDL version :-)

Hi Pavel--

The question is to have one big .PRO file, or many small .PRO files. Save files do not enter into my question [except that the .PRO files are designed to manipulate save files].

If I put a compile_opt directive in any of the .PRO files, then it will surely fail to compile by anybody with an older version of IDL. Right?

Craig

--

-----
Craig B. Markwardt, Ph.D.      EMAIL:    craigmnet@cow.physics.wisc.edu
Astrophysics, IDL, Finance, Derivatives | Remove "net" for better response
-----