Subject: Re: check for duplicate routine names?
Posted by Pavel A. Romashkin on Fri, 19 Jan 2001 21:34:26 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Aren't we tired yet of "Warning: Floating underflow" and such? If not, I guess, another similar one will be allright.

Cheers,
Pavel

Jaco van Gorkom wrote:
>
> Pavel A. Romashkin wrote:
>>
>> If I had a vote, I'd be strongly against such checking.
>> This means that any time I try to compile a routine which is already >> compiled, I'd be stopped by a warning message?! That would be a disaster >> for developing the code.
>
> Warnings need not stop you. I figure IDL should be capable of printing a > two-line warning message without crashing or anything. And in most > cases, warnings are there for the programmer to ignore.
> Apart from that, a warning would of course only be in order if the > compilation was done from a different source (be it .pro or .sav) then > the already compiled version.
>
> cheers,
>   Jaco
>
> -----------------------------
> Jaco van Gorkom   gorkom@rijnh.nl
> FOM-Instituut voor Plasmafysica Rijnhuizen