Subject: Re: check for duplicate routine names?
Posted by Jaco van Gorkom on Fri, 19 Jan 2001 17:06:49 GMT

Pavel A. Romashkin wrote:
>
> If I had a vote, I'd be strongly against such checking.
> This means that any time I try to compile a routine which is already > compiled, I'd be stopped by a warning message?! That would be a disaster > for developing the code.

Warnings need not stop you. I figure IDL should be capable of printing a two-line warning message without crashing or anything. And in most cases, warnings are there for the programmer to ignore.
Apart from that, a warning would of course only be in order if the compilation was done from a different source (be it .pro or .sav) then the already compiled version.

cheers,
  Jaco

Jaco van Gorkom   gorkom@rijnh.nl
FOM-Instituut voor Plasmafysica Rijnhuizen