
Subject: Re: .skip

Posted by Mark Fardal on Sun, 28 Jan 2001 23:18:22 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

> Mark Fardal (fardal@weka.astro.umass.edu) writes:

>> Before I submit a bug report, I thought I would ask whether people >> would like the feature change suggested above as well as the bug fix.
>> Or are people emotionally attached to the current behavior?

>

David writes:

> It looks like it behaves this way in IDL 5.4 on Windows, too.
> The good news is I'm not emotionally attached to this behavior, > since I have never used it. :-)

>

> Submit away!

>

> Cheers,

>

> David

You have never used .SKIP?! Well, it's very useful when you write a line with a bug that causes your program to crash. People who write IDL code without any bugs, of course, would have no need of this command.

cheers,
Mark
