Subject: Re: New to Linux not IDL
Posted by Vapuser on Wed, 21 Feb 2001 16:26:16 GMT

Ivan Zimine <ivan.zimine@physics.unige.ch> writes:

> Vapuser wrote:
>>
>>   I've put IDL on a redhat 7 system. The only problem I've had is with >>   the license manager, not that this isn't a small problem since this >>   is the way RSI prefers to do the licensing. When I had an >>   evaluation sort of license that didn't require the license manager,
>>   I had no problem.
>>
>>   There is a bug report in on the license manager issue but it only >>   went in on Friday. Besides, it's unclear to me that this isn't a >>   problem with my particular installation hardware (bp6 board with >>   dual celerons). It may be that other, less exotic installations will >>   have no problems at all.
>
> $RSI_DIR/idl_5.4/bin/bin.linux.x86/idl_lmgrd seems to be linked to > libc5.
> I've replaced it with a copy from IDL 5.2.1L and everything works fine.
> I don't think I have old libc installed on my system (SuSE 6.4, > k2.2.16).
>

  Interesting. I haven't gone so far as to check the dependencies issue.

  Are you listening RSI?

  Thanks!

whd
--
William Daffer: 818-354-0161: William.Daffer@jpl.nasa.gov