In article <9408291548.AA02660@poseidon.ifctr.mi.cnr.it>,
lucio@ifctr.mi.cnr.it (Lucio Chiappetti) wrote:

> In article <33n2vk$1gm@santix.santix.de>, ingo@santix.de (Ingo J. Averdunk) write:
> |>
> |> Could we all agree on posting CORBA- and IDL-related articles to the > |> newsgroup comp.lang.idl. I think that's what the group is for.
>
>   I do not know nothing about CORBA...

Me neither. Can someone explain what it is?

>   For me IDL means Interactive Data Language (a data visualization >   and analysis package from RSI Inc., exists since about 10 years)

It also means: "Interface Definition Language", used in creating GUI user interfaces.

>   There are two newsgroups :
>
>   1 comp.lang.idl
>   2 comp.lang.idl.pvwave
>
>   So what I assumed was that :
>
>   1 was dealing with IDL (RSI Inc. IDL)
>   2 was dealing only with PV-Wave specific things
> ...

I was under the impression (from the 'comp.lang.idl-pvwave' FAQ, item G09 - among others) that:

  1 Interface Definition Language discussion
  2 Interactive Data language & PV-Wave discussion

Am I missing good stuff on the "wrong" newsgroup? Should I also subscribe to 'comp.lang.idl'?

--
Geoff Sobering (Geoff.Sobering@nih.gov)
In Vivo NMR Research Center
National Institutes of Health