I'm using exceed to connect to unix machines from a windows 2000 machine. There is a particular application that I can use when I log in at the unix (HP-US in this case) console. When I connect from a windows 2000 machine and use exceed and hwm (exceed's window manager) to display on my screen, I often get errors related to color maps. Is there anyone out there in IDL land who has used exceed and can suggest some exceed configuration options that might help idl tolerate it better?

Mike
