
Subject: Re: Naive pointer question ?

Posted by the_cacc on Wed, 30 Jan 2002 13:02:48 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Craig Markwardt <craigmnet@cow.physics.wisc.edu> wrote:

>

> Let's say you have a widget application that stores its information in > a common block. Maybe you're not familiar with these types of > applications in IDL, but basically you need some kind of memory area, > which keeps information about widget ids, values selected by the user, > etc.

>

> -snip-

Ah, widgets - I've not delved far into that area of IDL programming.
Well thanks for the explanation, "Craig" ;)
