Subject: Re: support (lack thereof) for Mac version of IDL5.5.1
Posted by Wolf Schweitzer on Fri, 08 Mar 2002 15:02:48 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

There always is the price/anger/reply track, and it's ok, however it does not solve the problem.

What I do about the command line thing while fiddling with getting stuff right and going back and forth is:

Add a couple of empty spaces at the end of the line before I hit <enter>. That way, all that gets "lost" by the IDL551bug is one of these spaces and you can work with your previous command normally.

Wolf Schweitzer, Zuerich / Switzerland

In article <3C18EE9E.4852BB05@ll.mit.edu>,
 Richard Younger <younger@ll.mit.edu> wrote:

> Judy Karpen wrote:
>>
>> BTW, you can be snide if you wish, but it's YOUR (the taxpayers') >> money that is being wasted here -- I'm a US government employee, so >> my IDL license etc is paid for out of a gov't grant.
>
> I suspect that a very sizable majority of the IDL licenses out there > come from gov't money, whether directly (NOAA, NASA) or indirectly (via > NSF or DOD grant, or foreign equivalent), both in the US and overseas.
> All you have to do is look at the email addresses of those regularly on > the newsgroup.
>
>> And I still feel ripped off even though it isn't "my" money.....
>
> Well, you do have to deal with the frustration, so it's understandable.
> Still, there aren't that many snide comments made here: I would prefer > to characterize the tone of the newsgroup as flip and snipe back with a > smile.
>
> I do hope that you can convince RSI to take care of those aggravating > bugs.
>
> Best,
> Rich