
Subject: Re: Announcing RSI User-Contributed Library
Posted by Mike Alport on Fri, 06 Sep 2002 06:53:49 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

This should be a good idea - except there needs to be a feedback facility for discussion of problems with the contributed programs - since I can't find any such mechanism on the RSI site, I guess this newsgroup should suffice?

Mike

"Ken Mankoff" <mankoff@lasp.colorado.edu> wrote in message news:Pine.LNX.4.44.0209050850030.5549-100000@snowee.gi.alaska.edu...

>
>>
>> RSI is pleased to announce a new User-Contributed Library Web site >> at:
>>
>> <http://www.rsinc.com/codebank/index.asp?p=1&WID=1278689&s=988>
>>
>> The RSI User-Contributed Library is your tool for sharing code, >> images, data, and even technical white papers with other members of >> the RSI Software community. Submitting and retrieving files is a >> simple process. There are already a number of ENVI and IDL programs >> submitted by long-time users. We hope that you will enjoy the site, >> and that you will check back often as the collection grows.
>>
>> While the Web site is provided by RSI, the files in the library are >> provided by users of our software. When you contribute files to the >> library, your files still belong to you, and you will retain the >> ability to update or remove them.
>>
>> For more information, please read our recent press release:
>>
>> <http://www.rsinc.com/pr/detail.asp?p=1&PRID=76&WID=1278689&s=988>
>>
>
