Stein Vidar Hagfors Haugan (steinhh@astro.uio.no) writes:

> Now, David! I don't know about AXLABEL and LOGLEVELS, but after trying in vain > to find the exponent.pro routine in my own path, google helpfully points me to > this page:
>
> http://www.dfanning.com/tips/exponents.html
>
> It says "Last Updated 4 March 1999" so I guess it's forgiveable (any program > from last millennium is outdated?), but it's kind of funny anyhow. And yes, > certain stylistic features indicate that I am indeed the author ("my > moderately late second millennium style")!

Oh, right. This is funny, because it was suggested to me several weeks ago that I could find it on my web page.
So I went searching for it. I got so annoyed with the search engine I had there (I was searching a lot of documents and not finding what I was looking for) that I replaced the search engine with a Google search engine.
Then I forgot to go looking for the thing I was looking for in the first place!

Sigh... I hear they are making great progress on the Alzheimer's front. I hope so. :-(

Cheers,

David

--
David W. Fanning, Ph.D.
Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.
Phone: 970-221-0438, E-mail: david@dfanning.com
Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: http://www.dfanning.com/
Toll-Free IDL Book Orders: 1-888-461-0155