>
> This new tag-name prohibition might have subtle effects. For example, > I think MRDFITS reads a FITS table into a structure with fields named > according to the FITS column name. If the column is named 'FOR' or > 'BEGIN', then you are sunk?

MRDFITS checks that the table name is not one of 35 reserved IDL names.   If it is, then a '_' is prepended to the structure name tag (e.g. "_CASE").
If I remember correctly, the names that caused the most problems were the comparison operators (e.g. 'LE') which were the most likely to be a FITS table column name.

--Wayne Landsman