

---

Subject: Re: Slider Question

Posted by [Paul Van Delst\[1\]](#) on Mon, 07 Jul 2003 19:48:47 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

David Fanning wrote:

>

> Karthikayan Balakrishnan writes:

>

>> Is there a way to make a slider go in intervals of 5 instead of 1.

>> What I mean is this: when I use a slider in a widget, it displays in >> intervals of 1. Is there a way that allows me to start with say 5 and end >> with 100. The second allowable point on the slider is 10, the third 15, the >> fourth 20 and so on. I know that I can multiply by 5 in the event_pro >> procedure but that is not reflected in the slider's label. Any suggestions >> or recommendations?

>

> This is exactly why God made objects. (Well, one > of the *many* reasons, but certainly one of the > most practical.) Write yourself a little compound > widget/object that sets it's own label in units > of 5.

My preference would be for RSI^H^H^HGod to have included a SET_SLIDER_INCREMENT keyword to WIDGET_CONTROL. Then one wouldn't have to write *any* new software.

Now that's productivity :o)

paulv

--

Paul van Delst

CIMSS @ NOAA/NCEP/EMC

Ph: (301)763-8000 x7748

Fax:(301)763-8545

---