
Subject: Re: IDLWAVE path to idl binary
Posted by [Justin\[2\]](#) on Fri, 26 Sep 2003 21:00:25 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Oh yes - there it is clearly in the documentation under 'Starting the Shell'. I really should have noticed that.

Thanks for the solution, I am shelling now with gay abandon.

Justin

JD Smith <jdsmith@as.arizona.edu> wrote in news:pan.2003.09.26.18.48.41.358902.6651@as.arizona.edu:

- > IDLWAVE needs to know where IDL is to run it as a process. By
- > default, it attempts to invoke it as "idl", which presumes such an
- > executable is on your search path. You need to ensure "idl" is on
- > your $PATH, or specify the full pathname to the idl program with
- > 'idlwave-shell-explicit-file-name'. Note that you may need to set
- > your path in two places when running Emacs as an Aqua application
- > with MacOSX; see the next topic.
- >