Subject: Re: lmhostid Problem (network card as dongle)
Posted by R.Bauer on Wed, 18 Feb 2004 10:13:25 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Robert Moss wrote:
> I cannot answer your specific question, but I was wondering if you have > considered using the new Personal Use license which allows you to > install and use IDL on multiple machines?
>
> Robert Moss

Dear Robert

The personal license is only useful if you have yourself more as one machine and noone of your colleagues are using this machines too. It's only a personal license for the owner not for a different user on the same machine.

The personal license is only for windows or only for linux. This can't be mixed.

Reimar Bauer

>
> Reimar Bauer wrote:
>
>> Dear all
>>
>>
>> While the good "dongle" isn't available with idl6.0 we thought to use >> a pcmcia network card for traveling one IDL license to different >> notebooks. The card is moved to the notebook which should get the >> license.
>> We got different results for windows and linux.
>>
>>
>> on windows:
>> lmhostid compares every available network mac address with the license >> information. The notebook with the additional network card is able to >> use the idl license defined to this pcmcia card
>>
>> on linux:
>> lmhostid queries always only the first ethernet card (eth0). The >> others are ignored.
>> I hope someone has an excellent idea how to get the lmhostid querying >> an other network card too. Or is this a bug?

>>
>>
>> best regards
>>
>> Reimar
>
>