Subject: Re: Read XML and Base64 format
Posted by Irtzouk on Tue, 30 Mar 2004 01:22:33 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Thanks
I appreciate your answer but I have IDL 5.2. Is there a subroutine that could be adapted to replace it?
Denis Lafrance

 news:Pine.GHP.4.32.0403291439230.6159-100000@icesat2.gsfc.na sa.gov...
> On Mon, 29 Mar 2004, Nimportequoi wrote:
>
>> Hi All,
>> Does anybody have a routine that reads XML files and base64 encoded files?
>> Thanks in advance
>> DL
>
>   I don't know about Base64, but IDL has had an XML parser since version > 5.6. Look up the IDLffXMLSAX class. There are a couple examples of how > to use it, too.
>
>   (The documentation for IDLffXMLSAX leaves out some useful details. For > example, the Characters() method returns _all_ characters from a > (ending > one tag) to the next < (beginning the next tag), including any initial and > final linefeeds. Also, "&...;" forms ("<", "&", etc.) are > automatically translated into their respective characters (<, &, etc.), in > both attribute values and element content, but in content they always seem > to force a new Characters() call starting at that character.)
>
>   Hope this helps,
>
>   Jeff Guerber
>