
Subject: Re: How do I save parameters for next run?
Posted by Craig Markwardt on Thu, 01 Apr 2004 16:55:42 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Reimar Bauer <R.Bauer@fz-juelich.de> writes:

>> Folks,
>>
>> I am wondering if I can save the user input parameters for the next >> run of my program without creating additional files for it's "memory".
>>
>> Is it possible? Thanks.
>>
>> Yunxiang
>>
>
> Take a look on save and restore

But he asked about not creating additional files. Not too many options for that. If running on Unix, it's possible to wrap IDL in a script, either Perl or Bourne shell or whatever, and then establish a protocol for the script to capture your crucial outputs. Not elegant but it could work.

Craig
