
Subject: Re: Extremely Strange Program Behavior
Posted by Craig Markwardt on Sun, 23 May 2004 20:03:09 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

David Fanning <davidf@dfanning.com> writes:

> Now, here is the strange part. If I run the program again > immediately after I exit, the program crashes the IDLDE with one > of those dreaded "instruction at whatever couldn't read > memory at some other whatever" messages. (Which I am seeing > much more frequently, I think, since I upgraded to a new, > faster computer running Window XP, but that's another story.)

It doesn't ring any bells for me. However, if the crash is reproducible, including on a non-fast, non-XP machine, then it sounds like RSI could use your program to trap the error in a debugger and find the offending code within IDL.

Craig

--

Craig B. Markwardt, Ph.D. EMAIL: craigmnet@REMOVEcow.physics.wisc.edu
Astrophysics, IDL, Finance, Derivatives | Remove "net" for better response
