Subject: Re: Predefined Cursors in X Windows Posted by marcuirl on Mon, 09 Aug 2004 16:01:05 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Craig Markwardt <craigmnet@REMOVEcow.physics.wisc.edu> writes:

- > David Fanning <davidf@dfanning.com> writes:
- >> In X Windows, these numbers have to be something else. Something
- >> that is defined in /usr/include/X11/cursorfont.h.

>>

- >> Here is my question for you X windows guys. Is this file
- >> standard across all X windows implementations? If so,
- >> what number would I use to obtain these two types of
- >> cursors?

- > David, I just looked on Linux, Solaris, SunOS, and Alpha machines.
- > They all have essentially the same file (authored by either X
- > Consortium or OpenGroup), and more importantly the numeric constants
- > are all the same.

- > The cursors you want are:
- #define XC arrow 2
- #define XC xterm 152

But does not necessarily live in the same place: redhat 7.3, 7.2 and recent fedora fc1

/usr/X11R6/include/X11/cursorfont.h

a bit different from that above! HTH

marcu