
Subject: Re: Predefined Cursors in X Windows
Posted by marcuirl on Mon, 09 Aug 2004 16:01:05 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Craig Markwardt <craigmnet@REMOVEcow.physics.wisc.edu> writes:

```
> David Fanning <davidf@dfanning.com> writes:
>> In X Windows, these numbers have to be something else. Something >> that is defined in /usr/include/X11/cursorfont.h.
>>
>> Here is my question for you X windows guys. Is this file >> standard across all X windows implementations? If so, >> what number would I use to obtain these two types of >> cursors?
>
> David, I just looked on Linux, Solaris, SunOS, and Alpha machines.
> They all have essentially the same file (authored by either X > Consortium or OpenGroup), and more importantly the numeric constants > are all the same.
>
> The cursors you want are:
> #define XC_arrow 2
> #define XC_xterm 152
```

But does not necessarily live in the same place: redhat 7.3, 7.2 and recent fedora fc1

/usr/X11R6/include/X11/cursorfont.h

a bit different from that above! HTH

marcu
