Subject: Re: Predefined Cursors in X Windows Posted by Craig Markwardt on Mon, 09 Aug 2004 15:18:15 GMT View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

David Fanning <davidf@dfanning.com> writes:

- > In X Windows, these numbers have to be something else. Something
- > that is defined in /usr/include/X11/cursorfont.h.

- > Here is my question for you X windows guys. Is this file
- > standard across all X windows implementations? If so,
- > what number would I use to obtain these two types of
- > cursors?

David, I just looked on Linux, Solaris, SunOS, and Alpha machines. They all have essentially the same file (authored by either X Consortium or OpenGroup), and more importantly the numeric constants are all the same.

The cursors you want are: #define XC arrow 2 #define XC xterm 152

Craig

Craig B. Markwardt, Ph.D. EMAIL: craigmnet@REMOVEcow.physics.wisc.edu Astrophysics, IDL, Finance, Derivatives | Remove "net" for better response