
Subject: Re: Predefined Cursors in X Windows

Posted by Craig Markwardt on Mon, 09 Aug 2004 15:18:15 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

David Fanning <davidf@dfanning.com> writes:

> In X Windows, these numbers have to be something else. Something > that is defined in /usr/include/X11/cursorfont.h.
>
> Here is my question for you X windows guys. Is this file > standard across all X windows implementations? If so, > what number would I use to obtain these two types of > cursors?

David, I just looked on Linux, Solaris, SunOS, and Alpha machines.
They all have essentially the same file (authored by either X Consortium or OpenGroup), and more importantly the numeric constants are all the same.

The cursors you want are:

```
#define XC_arrow 2
#define XC_xterm 152
```

Craig

--

Craig B. Markwardt, Ph.D. EMAIL: craigmnet@REMOVEcow.physics.wisc.edu
Astrophysics, IDL, Finance, Derivatives | Remove "net" for better response
