Mort Canty writes:

> Sorry, David (and others). Was just trying to be funny, not sarcastic. (The > question was way off-beat.) It's a wonderful group.

Oh, goodness, no, I didn't think you were serious.
And, anyway, you had the required emotican to indicate your intentions. You were perfectly safe. :-)

Cheers,

David

P.S. Let's just say it was pointed out to me again this week how some people on this newsgroup just don't "get" my style of discourse. Striving for the humorous is (apparently) a minefield of danger. But how boring to live life from a position of safety. It should always be an adventure. One of my best friends is totally sarcastic. It's just about the best thing about him. :-)

--
David Fanning, Ph.D.
Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.
Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: http://www.dfanning.com/