
Subject: Re: HDF5 Write

Posted by Haje Korth on Fri, 20 Aug 2004 12:24:45 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

The final is out here in the US, but not available for download yet. They say they are shipping to current customers now, but last year it took 4+ weeks until we final got it at our lab. Anyway, there is hope for your HDF5 efforts to begin shortly.

Haje

"Rick Towler" <rtowler@xxx.u.washington.edu> wrote in message news:cg3999\$06i\$1@gnus01.u.washington.edu...

> Hey Dave,

>

> I have been told that "soon" means soonish. :)

>

> RSI has assured me that they are working on support for writing HDF5 > files and that effort would be directed towards this project after 6.1
> shipped and the dust settled a bit.

>

> Now plans do change but I would hope that a final version would be > released before the end of the year.

>

> Cross your fingers.

>

> -Rick

>

> P.S. I thought you left the world of IDL ;)

>

>

>

> David Chevrier wrote:

>

>> Hi,

>> I just watched the "What's New in 6.1" presentation on RSI's >> site. It was done ok, but the sound really sucked and they require an >> install of WebEx. Anyway, I was told by RSI back on the "What's New >> in 6.0 World Tour" thingie, that 6.1 would have HDF5 WRITE support... >> which it doesn't. According to one slide on the W.N.I.6.1
>> presentation, they said HDF5 write support would be available soon.
>> My questions are how soon and in what form, a patch for 6.1 or wait >> until 6.2???? Any time tables RSI?

>> Except for this small point 6.1 seems to be great. I really like >> not having to install VM to run .sav's and the alpha channel on the >> surface and polygon objects rock!!!

```
>> Have fun,
>> dave
```
