It seems that Windows doesn't know how to display the output. Anyway, I found Rick Towler's console object a very enlightening solution. I just have to make some small changes to meet my needs. Basically I just added a context menu so that it can save/clear what's in the text widget. So now it can be easily used as a log console. Imagine how wonderful to have your old console based programs running anywhere interactively without adding complicated GUIs. :)
