Folks,

I want to say thanks to the many of you who have sent e-mails telling me you have enjoyed my Munich stories. I just wanted to alert you that I have reorganized my web page a bit to make it easier for me to update these stories, and to make a couple of other ones available. (I've added a longer account of my Arctic adventure, but I still have copious notes for a longer, more serious, essay I plan to write.)

Now there is one place to access my stories:

<http://www.dfanning.com/adventures>

And if you are looking for Munich stories, you can find them here:

I'm having a great time here in Garching. Finally becoming a bit more comfortable with how things work (although I nearly burned my apartment to the ground yesterday--a development I will be writing about, probably, if I can gain enough distance from it and the smoke clears in my apartment).

I always appreciate knowing folks are reading these accounts. :-)

Auf Wiedersehen,

David
