Vince Hradil wrote:
> We have runtime licenses, so I like to use those because of certain > limitations using the vm - especially the device colors issues 8^(.
> So I run the sav files using idl -rt=file.sav.  However, if the rt > license cannot be found, the vm starts up.  Is there a way to make > sure that the vm does NOT start up?  Here are a couple of options I > thought of:
> 1-check for lmgr(/vm) in my code and gracefully exit.  Of course, the > user will still have to deal with the annoying splash screen - then > not get any satisfaction from the failed program > 2-uninstall (delete) the vm - how?

Try idlrt -novm file.sav

I haven't tried it, but looking at the idlrt binary I see this as an option.  The full list of options are (win32):

-em
-vm
-novm
-student

-Rick

---