
Subject: Re: PVI jerk toots own horn on net [flame; how'd you guess? :-]

Posted by fedor on Thu, 20 Aug 1992 17:59:45 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

In article <ALANS.92Aug19170731@abraham.juliet.ll.mit.edu> alans@ll.mit.edu (Alan Jay Stein) writes:

> As you may recall, On Wed, 19 Aug 1992 16:30:13 GMT, greg@pvi.UUCP (Greg Holling x376) said:

>

[lots of flammable personal attacks and suspected advertisements deleted]

>

> First of all, this is no place to advertise! I can't believe PVI doesn't have a > corporate policy prohibiting this, but I'm sure gonna find out now!

>

I ain't saying whether IDL or PV-WAVE is better, but even if Greg's comment was an advertisement (which is debatable), I think personal attacks on someone's character are far more reprehensible. Lets try to discuss matters of etiquette (via e-mail hopefully) rationally, since the difference between commercial and non-commercial use of the net is often a very fine line (see comp.newprod, comp.sys.next.announce, and probably a few others).

--

Adam Fedor. CU, Boulder | Fudd's Law of Opposition: Push something fedor@boulder.colorado.edu | hard enough and it will fall over.
