

---

Subject: Re: Linking buttons to plot windows

Posted by David Fanning on Thu, 23 Dec 2004 00:52:29 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Robert Barnett writes:

- > And look ... it's possible to write an entire application demonstrating
- > this in little over half the code it took to write the event loop for
- > GUI builder. Apologies, the excess documentation makes it a little hard
- > to read.

Well, that's an interesting little program. Living in the time zone you do, I hope you have a broadband connection. I expect you are going to be getting some e-mail. :-)

This program has a decidedly object-like flavor to it. Where did you learn to write widget programs, Robbie?

Cheers,

David

P.S. Even after all these years, I'm still afraid to write widget programs without an XMANAGER call to get them going. I'm afraid I'll confuse the small following I have left. :-)

--

David Fanning, Ph.D.

Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.

Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: <http://www.dfanning.com/>

---