I've already been doing that. Nevertheless, I managed to have a great IDL Object Graphics victory over the weekend and I'm not about to embark on another epic journey back into the bowels of the language so soon. There are some laurels that need to be rested on first! :-)

What you lined out was about the only think I could think of -- rolling your own histogram drawing routine. There might come a day when I try such a thing, but today's not the day -- I need to get comfy with those laurels and get my energy back. :-)
