Subject: Re: autocomplete

Posted by maarten on Fri, 01 Apr 2005 13:56:08 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Thanks this is a major improvement!

Is there however another option for the 'arrow up' question, because I am not really happy with M-r and having to repeat that many times.

cheers maarten

maarten wrote:

- > Hello everybody,
- >
- > I was wondering whether it is possible to have some sort of
- > autocompletion at the IDL prompt in Linux. When working in Matlab for
- > example typing the first few letters of a command or file and pressing
- > 'tab' results in automatic completing the rest. (the same way the
- > xterminal works). Another very useful feature is that when the first few
- > letters are typed, pressing 'arrow up' results in only history results
- > that start with these letters. Is it possible to have this implemented
- > in IDL, or are there any other 'terminal' like command lines that offer
- > these features in which IDL can be run. At the moment I am running IDL
- > at the command line under Linux.
- > I hope someone knows whether this is possible, or that RSINC is working
- > on something like this. Because in my opinion it would greatly improve IDL.
- > Cheers maarten.
- >

>