This may be a very bad news to us who like IDL. Anyway, thank you for those responses to my questions, and good luck to you!

Tian.

David Fanning wrote: > Folks,
>
> This is my last post here (shy of 10,000 posts, I think).
> I've been touring college campuses with my middle son > the past week and I have decided to return to college > and study either Musical Theater (if I can learn to sing, > which is doubtful) or Film and Video Production.
>
> That is, I will be if I can overcome the strong feelings > of fear I have upon entering unisex bathrooms. (In my > day we thought we were on the cutting edge with coed > dorms.) I'm pretty sure I would have been arrested 30 > years ago for going into the places I was forced to go > into on this trip. And I still can't help thinking > the sheriff is going to clap me in irons every time I make > eye contact with these pretty coeds in their, uh, pajamas. :-(
>
> No wonder people don't seem to be able to write > computer programs as well as they used to....
>
> Cheers,
>
> David
>
> --
> David Fanning, Ph.D.
> Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.
> Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: http://www.dfanning.com/