Subject: Re: Looking for IDL code documentation standards
Posted by Ken Mankoff on Tue, 17 May 2005 14:04:05 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Tue, 17 May 2005, Ben Panter wrote:
> JD Smith wrote:
>> I whipped up this example coding standard, trivially enforceable
>> by IDLWAVE:
>>
>> http://idlwave.org/idlwave_template.pro.html
>
> Slightly at a tangent, but how did you produce the syntax > highlighted html? I'd thought of running the colour postscript > output of IDLWAVE through some sort of ps->html conversion but > never got any further. Is there already some software out there to > do this?

I use this to generate pretty-print PS files. I think a2ps can also be used to generate HTML.

  a2ps --pre=idl --pro=color foo.pro

There is also a pretty-print-buffer command in emacs.

  -k.