Subject: Re: converting floats to doubles
Posted by Benjamin Hornberger on Fri, 20 May 2005 20:58:21 GMT

Michael Wallace wrote:
>
> dblarr(n) is the same as double(fltarr(n)). The fltarr(n) will create n > many floating point numbers, all of which are 0. Converting all these > floats into doubles will yield a double array where all values are 0 and > this is the very same thing as dblarr(n).

Actually I meant dindgen(n) vs. double(findgen(n)) in the first place. I always mix them up ... But I think I got the point.

Thanks,
Benjamin