Subject: Re: idl command line on windows
Posted by JD Smith on Thu, 04 Aug 2005 23:08:44 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Fri, 05 Aug 2005 10:14:16 +1200, Mark Hadfield wrote:

> Michael Wallace wrote:
>> There is no command line interface on Windows; you only get the >> development environment. This is yet another "feature" some of us have >> bugged RSI about in the past...
>
> I must say that I have grumbled about this in the past on this newsgroup > and threatened to bug RSI, but never really got around to it.
>
> Has anyone submitted a formal feature request? What was the response? If > bugging RSI about it again would help, I'd be glad to try.

I know that at least a proof of concept of such a thing has seen the light of day sometime in the past, so I think grumbling might indeed help.
Presumably IDLWAVE could run such a command-line IDL as a sub-shell without problem.

JD